"Wy me, de bear? Wy not you?" was Lassette's reply.

"Cause you de beeges', an' you move yourself somep'n lak bear, anyway." argued Gonya, and it was so finally agreed. The skin was carefully sewed up to accommodate Lassette's stalwart frame. In due time a most lifelike bear's headplece came from Boston, and all was in readiness for the big day.

Riding in the barnyard-made 'cage' with Lassette, to give an imagined realistic touch, was Gonya's big hound. The smelled Lassette's pipe, with its glowing load of Canadian homegrown's hag' tobacco, and decided, "Oh, shoucks! Frenchman." Just as the float swung into the long single street, which is lined with Bethlehem's hostelries and which swarmed with Bethlehem's patrons, Lassette doused his pipe and clapped on the artificial head.

"There! I was right the first time." mused the hound. "It's a bear," and immediately took a generous bite of the loose, hairy skin, getting, at the same time, a bit of Lassette's tough cutiele. "Gonya! Joe!" came a muffled voice from the head: "dees houn', she flink Pm for the form the department. TESTIFIES THAT SHE SLEW HUSBAND IN SELF-DEFENSE

Mrs. Margaret C. Beutinger Recites Abuses He Subjected Her To and Threats He Made.

NEWARK, October 26.-Testifying n her own defense today on the charge of murdering her husband Cristof, Mrs. which she swore he had made to kill her husband solely in self-defense, be-Heving that he was about to attack her.

She said she married Beutinger in 1906 and went to the Philippines with him, where he became a clerk to an army quartermaster. Beutinger began to drink, she swore, often beat her, choked her and was cruel in other ways. After he had attempted to kill her because she threatened to report money irregularities to the quartermaster, she left him. She rejoined him, however, and they returned to the United States.
